

PROFILE/OVERVIEW

At Booth Hansen, we are driven by a single focus. From monuments to museums; from places of work to places of worship; from interior renovations to multi-family residences — our goal is to achieve an enriching architectural experience and a project of enduring quality for the client and community.

We believe that good design comes from a well organized process, producing a wide variety of options that lead to the most informed solution. Reaching beyond methodologies, our process encompasses the basic tenants of spirit, connection, and stewardship:

Stewardship — Being aware of the impacts of our work on the earth and making the most of our resources.

Connection — Exploring the fundamental interconnections between nature and the built environment, between people and place; between past and future.

Spirit — Infusing buildings with an aesthetic quality, emotional value, and moral dimension that reflect the culture and character of those it serves.

We employ these principles with steadfast dedication, creating value-driven architecture that expresses the distinct goals of the client.
